Lab tests are used to help confirm a diagnosis, monitor an illness, and the patient's response to treatment. In the NCLEX, some questions supply laboratory results with no indication of the normal lab levels so you'll have to familiarize yourself with them. NCLEX will not give you values that are within normal range.

The NCLEX-RN is more difficult than the NCLEX. The NCLEX-RN is made for nursing professionals who have experience giving direction to others, and are ready to work in a supervisory role. The NCLEX is not as complex and is designed for nurses who are just beginning to enter the profession. While both tests are difficult, nurses who have taken both exams agree that the NCLEX-RN is more challenging.
